HEROIC COMSULS.

The Consuls of Great Britain and the United States Interpose their Flags and Persons to Save a Refugee.

From the London Herald. The following interesting and exciting narra tive, of which we published a short telegraphic account a few days ago, is extracted from the imaica Guardian of August 7, to which it was furnished by a correspondent who recently escaped from Santiago de Cuba, where he was persecuted by the Spanish volunteers in conse-quence of being suspected as "a Cuban sympa-

Mr. Ramsden, the consul, being well known and greatly respected in Kingston, the subject has been one of general conversation, while his neroic conduct has called forth expressions of universal admiration. The paragraph runs thus:
"A poor unfortunate seaman had been appreheuded on a charge of being implicated in a fillbustering expedition, and he was thrust into prison and afterwards condemned to be shot, on evidence as improbable as any one could conceive. He was an American, the son of Eng-lish parents, and notwithstanding the strenuous efforts on the part of the English and American consuls, the Spanish authorities seemed deter-mined to sacrifice this poor man's life. On the morning appointed for his execution he was marched out to the usual place, amidst a great show of bloody solemnity. He was immediately followed by Mr. Ramsden, British vice-consul, and the American vice-consul, to make

"Mr. Ramsden read the document, protesting, in the name of England and America, declaring that the prisoner was altogether innocent of the charge which had been laid against him, demanding his immediate release, and declaring, if the unfortunate man's life was taken, those who took it would be guilty of murder, and would be alike answerable to the Governments of England and the United States of America. During the reading of this document, which was done with calmness and determination, the prioner fainted from excitement, and there were strong signs of impatience on the part of the Spanish troops, who manifested a thorough de-termination to force the authorities to take this an's life in spite of all remonstrance.
"A consultation followed, and Mr. Ramsde and the American Consul were eventually i formed that their remonstrance came too lat the prisoner had already been sentenced leath for having taken up arms against Spai and that the sentence must be carried into effect. With this the order was given to the firing party o 'present.' It was the work of an instant, and Mr. Consul Ramsden and the American Consul, rushing with the flags of their respective nations efore the levelled ritles of the Spanish troops, and in front of the unfortunate man, shouted Hold! And throwing the English flag around himself and the prisoner, and addressing the officer in charge of the firing party, said, "Gendlemen, as a consul of her Britannic Majesty I demen, as a consul of her Britannic Majesty I cannot stand silently by and see this foul murder of an innocent man. It is my duty to protect his life, and if you take his you must take it through these!—placing himself immediately in front of the condemned seaman, his eyes sparkling, while his manly form heaved. with the indignation his speech had so heroically expressed. The American Consul, wrapped in 'Stars and Stripes' of the Union, stood reast, and for some moments the Spanlards tood aghast, the conduct of these two Consuls sing more than they could comprehend. The motion of the prisoner was extreme; he was upported right and left by the Consuls, and the or fellow shed a profusion of tears from weariess and excitement. A consultation was again ield, and the prisoner marched back to jail mder an escort of troops, the Consuls support-ng the unhappy man all the way along. The urore was beyond description. After dark the risoner was reprieved, and finally shipped off ie country through the indefatigable exertions in the Illinois State Journal, Sept. 11. One of the most daring robberies ever com aitted in this State was perpetrated at the First ational Bank of this city, yesterday afternoon, about one o'clock. The boldness of the act hows most conclusively that the rebber is an xperienced hand at the business. The circumances of the case are as follows:—Yesterday corning a man who gave his name as William . Stamford appeared at the counter of the irst National Bank, situated at the corner of Vashington and Fifth streets, and made inquies of Mr. Charles Abell, the Teller, in relation what the bank was paying for 5-20 bonds, ating that he had some which he thought of isposing of. He received the necessary in-formation and left. While Stanford was conersing with the Teller a stranger entered and assed a short distance towards the President's oom, but immediately turned and went out ithout stating his business.

DARING ROBBERY.

At this time there was piled up upon the end f a table standing near the vanit several packges of money, amounting to $15,100, which ad been received during the morning and had een left upon the table for the purpose of being cunted before being placed in the vault. At about noon, Mr. Abell and Mr. Al. Williams eing in the bank, the cashier, book-keeper, and ther employes being absent. While Mr. Abell was aking the calculation at the counter, Mr. Wilims was engaged at a desk making out drafts, ad it was during this time the robbery was mmitted. While the teller was thus en-aged with Stamford, Mr. Tracy, the casmer, he had been absent, returned, and coming in the door of the President's room from Fifth et, met a man coming out with a large bune of money under his arm-the money being t up in the usual form, but without a wrapper r. Mr. Tracy, leaving the robber charge of the porter and hers, procured a policeman and arrested their amford while he was at the counter. amford demanded to know why he was arsted, and was informed that that question ould be answered at the Police Court. # THE BOAT RACE.

ntery was made:-To the Editor of the London Times:—Reductant as I am to take any notice of what may appear in any of the papers after a boat race, and especially one in which I have been myself engaged, I cannot allow the letter which Sir Aubrey Paul has addressed to the Times and other papers to pass without some

He writes to say that the Oxford crew won last Friday by a tength and three-quarters, instead of our, as commonly reported. Now, as nearly all the newspaper accounts give the distance as four lengths, this appears a direct contradiction, and it is this apparent contradiction which I wish to ex-

Sir Aubrey Paul was chosen by the Harvard crew Sir Aubrey Paul was chosen by the Harvard crew as judge at the finish of the race, than whom I am sure a more 'upright judge' could not be found, and what he states I believe to be correct.

However, I wish to explain how we came to be only a length and three-quarters ahead at the finish, which, from my position in the bow of the boat, I think I am competent to do. Just below the ship at Mortlake we were as near as I could judge four or the lengths in front, but here a row-boat) which has been mentioned as throwing us out of course) caused us to lose about a length.

We of course expected, as we had started a certain distance above the Aqueduct, to row an equal distance above the Ship; but after rowing about that distance, and finding we had not yet reached the index we have the thick whether the about that distance, and finding we had not yet reached the judge, we began to think whether the flagboat had not been forgotten. I myself looked round and could see nothing of it; we even called to some people in a boat to know where it was, but they said they could not see it; so we paddled on and eventually came to it so far on that we kept on grumbling and talking as we rowed along, and I even said to Mr. Yarborough, "I vote we stop, for I am not going to row much further." All this time we were rowing leisurely, as the race was safe; but the Harvard men were still rowing on hard with that pluck and determination with which they rowed all through the race, and it may therefore be readily conceived that they gained on us considerably, and the "flat" of the judge is doubtless correct. I have tried to explain this apparent anomaly to the best of my ability because I have heard many people debating about it, and no doubt many bets were made as to the distance we should with by but I have people will in the contract of the stance we should with by but I have people will use the contract of the contr tance we should win by; but I hope people will un-derstand that we did not row the race to win them money, and that as the crew had not one farthing at stake it was to some extent immaterial how much they won by. Apologizing for intruding so much upon your space, which I should not have done had it not occurred to me that no one else would offe any explanation, and that the next thing we migh hear from some one would be that we should have been repassed in a few hundred yards, believe me yours faithfully, Whitchurch, Oxon, Sept. 1.

How Beecher Took Defeat.

Beecher could not attend the banquet to the Harvard Boys yesterday, and sent the following note of PEEKSEILL, September 13 .- My Dear Sir :- Nothin but liness would prevent me from being present at the dinner given to the Harvard returning boat crew by the associated clubs of New York and Brooklyn. I watched their every step going over, while there, and during the race, with an interest which could hardly be surpassed. I was so cast down at the news of their defeat that I could not rails my spirits all that day I was however. rally my spirits all that day. It was, however, but for the day; I am abundantly satisfied now, and am proud of men whose defeat is so glorious in both hemispheres. I am not of those who count such efforts a waste of time and money. I believe them to be contributions to a true manhood. In this case I believe that the Harvard crew have been peacemakers between two great nations that ought to be eternal friends. They have called out a sympathy and a cordial good fellowship which will not subside. There may be good work done with oars as well as pens in statesmanship. If I were with you I should like to give them each a cordial grip of the hand, and to tell them that I for one am heartly obliged to them. I am truly yours, am proud of men whose defeat is so glorious in bot bliged to them. I am truly yours, HENRY WARD BRECHER.

DISASTER.

Shipwreck Off Cape May.

At S.A. M. of the Sth inst., a sudden hurricane sprang up in latitude 38 deg. 50 min., longitude 71-50, about 150 miles to the eastward of Cape May, in which the whaling barque Thomas Winslow, of New Bedford, was thrown upon her beam ends, and rapidly filled with water. The shock was so sudden, although not entirely unexpected, most of the larger sails having been double-reefed in expectation of a squall, that four of the crew were washed away, the rest barely gaining a place on the mizzen chains. Working for dear life, the sailors at once cut away the weather lanyards, fore, main, and mizzen, and the ship partially righted, the sea breaking over her with terrific force. While the weather lanyards were being cut away seven men were washed off from the mizzen chains, of whom only four were saved, the others struggling wildly for a moment, then going down exhaus'ed, and in full sight of their comrades. As soon as the vessel righted, Captain Russell, seeing that the only chance for life and home lay in the advent of a vessel, set the survivors Shipwreck Off Cape May.

of his crew to keep a sharp outlook for a sail. From 8.4. M. until 1 P. M., the wearied sallers claing desperately to the wreck, tired and worn out, and almost despairing, but at the latter hour the gale began to abate, and their position became somewhat more endurable. At 3 P. M. a large brig-rigged steamer passed two miles to the leeward, heading west, but no efforts of the shipwrecked mariners could avail anything in causing their signal of distress to be seen. The vessel steamed on, those on board little dreaming of the misery she left in her wake, and Captain Russell and his men were again left to their lonely watch. In a short time afterwards their signal attracted the attention of Captain Cowell, of the brig T. H. A. Pitt, who put on a little more sail, passed under the lee of the stratuced vessel, and in a few moments sent a boat to the research one board the Pitt, which sailed off on her way to Bermuda. Mr. John Whiting, first officer of the Pitt, is entitled to great credit for his exertions, as he voluntarily took charge of the boat which was sent off in a heavy sea to the rescue of the sallors. On the 10th inst. the Pitt foil in with the Danish brig Jylland, Captain Hondling, and this officers kindly offered to bring such of the survivors as he could accommodate to New York. The following officers and men availed themselves of his kindness; Captain Ethiu Russell; D. W. Simpson, first mate; Charles F. Childs, escond mate; Charles Rewenter, third mate; and George H. Cleveland, seaman. The names of the sevan men who were drowned are John A. Amos, of Jamaica Plains; Rufus Dexter, of Marion; Henry Wingard, a German; Manuel, a Portuguese; and three French Creoles, names unknown.

The Story of the Attempt to Blow Up the Frigate.

From the N. Y. Times of this morning.

Our Paris correspondent writes about the attempt to blow up the Sabine at Cherbourg, which was vaguely alluded to by a cable despatch some days ago, and caused considerable alarm, as follows:—
"The Journal du Hacre, of Monday, contains the account of the execution of seven American sailors, in the open sea before Cherbourg, for being concerned in a plot to blow up the United States frigate Sabine. The following are the details:—For the last ten days the frigate had been anchored in the roadstead. On Saturday morning a midshipman descended into the hold to execute an order from one of his superiors, and perceived a match, one end of which was burning, and the other of which communicated with the powder magazine. He hastly reascended and apprised the account of the execution of seven American sailors. magazine. He hastily reascended and apprised the officers on beard of the fact, so that the match was immediately extinguished. It was time, for a few minutes later the frigate would have been blown up.

"The commander on board the Sabine immediately commenced an inquiry, which led to the discovery of commenced an inquiry, which led to the discovery of a plot having for its object the destruction of the American frigate and of the whole of its personnel. The authors of this wicked attempt did not recoil before the prospect of a certain death in order to satisfy their savage vengeance. Twenty-two sallors were placed in irons, and seven were condemned to be hung immediately. Before executing them, the commendant of the Sabine applied to the competent authority at Cherbourg for permission to carry out the sentence on the spot, but this permission was not granted. The Sabine, therefore, immediately lifted her anchor, put out to sea, and had barely quitted the roadstead when ropes working on pulleys hoisted the guilty wretches into the air. Human justice was satisfied, and an example of terrible punishment given. Several boatmen, who happened to be behind the mole, were witnesses of this sad spectacle."

Horrible Murder of a Butcher in Cincionati-The Clothes Rifled and the Body Thrown Into Despatch to The Evening Telegraph.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15,-John M. Kraetz, a respectable butcher, residing at No. 263 Wade street, has been in the habit of rising before 3 o'clock on market days to prepare for the morning's work. He kept his horse in the stable of a widow woman, who lives on Betts alley, between Wade and Everett, just around the corner from his residence. Yesterday morning he arose as usual about 3 o'clock; left the house for the purpose of harnessing his horse. A few minutes after he had gone a pistol report was heard by Mrs. Kruetz. She did not at once surmise the terrible truth. A very few minutes of unaccustomed delay, however, on the part of her husband sufficed to awaken her anxiety. She went to the corner, and saw the horse ready harnessed and a wagon standing by the open door of the stable. To the latter she went at once and called. Receiving no answer, she was hurrying back to call the eldest daughter when she stumbled upon the form of her husband, lying lifeless in the gutter by the wagon. She shricked murder, and ran home, meeting the daughter at the door. Together, and joined by the aroused neighbors, they returned to the corpse. It appeared that the entire right side of the upper part of the head of the murdered man was gone. Even the brain was missing, and it was not found till daylight revealed it scattered horribly upon the boarding of the opposite stables. A small pocket-pistol, empty, lay by the body, and had apparently been the instrument of death. The pockets of Kruetz had been turned inside out, and his pocket-book, empty, was found a few feet from where he lay. The deceased was forty-nine years of age, and leaves a wife and five children.

The Humboldt Celebration Yesterday.

New Haven, Sept. 15 .- The Germans celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Humboldt yesterday with a large procession in the morning, exercises at Miller's Garden in the afternoon, and a dance in the evening. Yale Scientific School was elaborately decorated, and when the procession reached the building it came to a halt and Professor Lyman made a short address. At the garden an oration in English was delivered by Professor D. C. Gilman, of Yale, and in German by H. Zeigel, editor of the German Republican. The exercises were generally participated in by the scientific men of the city. Many private residences were decorated.

The sale was under a writ of jeri facius, issued to Robert S. Green, a Master in Chancery of New Jersey, by the bondholders of the line, for non-payment of a mortgage on the line and stock of $1,000,000, and accumulated interest to the amount of $1,700,000. The sale caused a great deal of excitement among the shareholders, and the auction room was crowded with capitalists and spectators.

holders, and the auction room was crowded with capitalists and spectators.

The property was sold is two lots, the first comprising the railroad and its corporate franchises and rights. The second consisted of the entire rolling stock of the company, the locomotives, cars, and the steamboat Jesse Hoyt. Both lots were knocked down to the bondholders of the company after a very feeble competition, the first for $50,000 and the second for $74,000. The prices were only nominal, it being understood that the bondholders were determined to buy in the line, and no opposition was offered.

The new proprietors will have a fresh board of directors, of which Charles Gould, of New York, is proposed as President, and intend issuing $3,000,000 worth of new stock and raising $3,000,000 on fresh mortgage bonds, the majority of which is to be expended in putting the road into better working order and immoving the stock. and improving the stock.

GOLD.

A Conspiracy to Ruise the Premium.

From the New York Tribune of this Morning. We are credibly informed that certain financiers of our city, in combination with European capitalists, have conspired to buy and withdraw thirty millions of gold, with intent to compel those who must pay gold at the Custom House or elsewhere to buy of them at exorbitant rates. We call upon the Secretary of the Treasury to take them at exorbitant rates.

We call upon the Secretary of the Treasury to take the needful steps to ascertain the facts, and, if there be such a combination, to use the power lodged in his hands as the public good requires. The Treasury has gold to sell—a good pile of it—and it is the Secretary's duty to sell is when the market is the highest. If, then, the conspirators put up the price of gold, let him improve the opportunity to obtain such price for as many millions of that commodity as the market will take. And, to preclude all pretense that he thereby makes money (greenbacks) "tight," let him buy bonds as fast as he sells gold, so as to leave the money market wholly unaffected.

Mr. Boutwell can surely ascertain that such conspiracy does or does not exist. If it does, we submit that his duty is plain and imperative—to sell gold so long as the market will take it, and invest the proceeds in bonds. ceeds in bonds.

BILLIARDS.

Deery Wins the Championship Match. Last night John Deery and Melvin Foster con-ended for the billiard championship of America.

Last night John Deery and Melvin Foster contended for the billiard championship of America. This was the result:—

Deery won the lead, and laid his own ball near the bottom cushion on the right hand side. Foster misses and Deery scored an easy 9. In the fourth inning Foster woke up to a run of 54, and the play began in earnest. From the fourth inning Foster gradually drew away from his opponent until on the fourth call at the end of Foster's seventeenth inning, the score stood:—Foster, 302: Deery, 182. In the next five innings Deery spurited with runs of 63, 33, and 69, until the sixth call was had, and the score showed Foster, 372: Deery, 353. During Foster's next large run he made the remarkably quick time of thirty-four points in a minute. He played very brilliantly for the first half of the game, but after Deery came even with him his nerve seemed to fall him, and though some of his shots were very brilliant, he lost the perfect command of the balls which he had before exhibited. Deery played with admirable steadiness throughout, as well when behind as when in advance, and finally, by a run of 50, won the game at a few minutes past midnight. By this victory he retains the champion cue and wins $500.

Pepper's Tavern, Holmes Co., O., Sept. 1.

—I hed parshelly prepared an appeal to the Democracy uv Maine, Ohio, and Pennsylvany, but jest ez I wuz a finishin uv it up, that infamous wretch, Pepper, came in with his bill for board. I can't liquidate it, and I am preparing to be ejected from the premises. Ez I know from experience what method will be adopted to remove me from the house. I have stuffed the sheets from perience what method will be adopted to remove me from the house, I hev stuffed the sheets from my bed in the seat uv my pantaloons. Thus genius mitigates evils wich it cannot altogether avoid. The sheets will ease the kick, and kin be sold for enuff to pay ralerode fare. Let Pep per come. I am prepared. I shel go to Moch Chunk, Pennsylvania. Asa Packer, our glorious standard-bearer, bez twelve millions uv dollars, and I want to get in afore it is all gone, Ez the leaders uv the Philadelphia Dimocracy hey hed full swing at him for overa month, I must make haste. In the general bleedin the old man hez subjected hisself to, it would be an infamous shame if I didn't git a few drops. Oh that Pendleton was old, and rich, and anxious to be Governor. O how I envy them Pennsylvania Democrats who have Packer in hand! It's better for em than a gold mine. But-I hear Pepper's steps on the stairs. Addoo.

"Gold was firm until late in the day, when it de-clined on a report that Secretary Boutwell would be in the city to-morrow and investigate the operations of the gold-gambling cliques. OFFICE OF THE EVENING TELEGRAPH, Wednesday, Sept. 15, 1869. The weekly statement of the New York banks for The weekly statement of the New York banks for the past week a satisfactory proof that the market had been tampered with by stock speculators with the aid or connivance of the bank officials. The market last week suffered a combined loss in legal-tenders and specie of nearly $7.000,000, whilst the deposits during the week fell off only $2,277,000. With this heavy loss in resources, it is a curious fact that the sources, it is a curious fact that the poans should have increased considerably over $6,000,000! These anomalies are to be accounted for on the assumption that legal tenders have been locked up to the extent of several millions, and that ioans are being illegally made on currency collaterals. Insamuch as these proceedings have a demoralizing effect on finance and trade all over the country, it would be well if the Treasury Department would order a thorough investigation into the matter and punish the guilty parties severely.

and punish the guilty parties severely.

The rates of the past week are still current, with no probability of an early change.

Gold opened with a rather weak feeling, and the market is unusually free from fluctuation, opening and closing at noon at 130%.

Governments continue dull, with very little speculative or investment demand from any quarter.
